SALT LAKER WHO KNEW MARK TWAIN

John M. Worley of This City Tells How Samuel L. Clemens Got His Name.

ON BOAT WHEN IT HAPPENED

Relates a Number of Incidents Connected With Early Life of America's Greatest Humorist.

Samuel L. Clemens, the famous homorist who died at his home in New York last week, obtained his nom de plume of "Mark Twain," which has given him world renown, in a most accidental way, and one of Salt Lake City's old-timers, John M. Worley was running on the Mississippi river at the time and was intimately ac quainted with "Sam," as he calls him, and still has vivid recollections of those early days and of the circum-stance of the adoption of the title of "Mark Twain."

of "Mark Twain."

"Sam was a cub pilot on the river from about '52 to '61, until the war broke out and the river business went to pieces," said Mr. Worley this morning. "Some say he got his papers as a full fledged pilot, before he quit, but if he did I was not aware of it. He was a 'cub,' which means an amateur, all the time as far as I knew. He was pilot on three of the river steamers, on the Edward J. Gay, the Michigan and the Oceana. I was clerk on the last named boat. These steamers were about 1,000 tons; cost clerk on the last named boat. These steamers were about 1,000 tons; cost $60,000; carried 150 passengers and freight; made the trip from St. Louis to New Oreleans, 200 miles, in six days were called 6-day boats because it took that time for the trip. They could make a maximum of perhaps 12 miles an hour up stream, which was considered pretty fast in those days.

ORIGIN OF NOM DE PLUME.

"Sam was on the 'Gay, at the time he secured his new name of Mark Twain, and was a young man of about 25 years old, and cub pilot at the time. Bert Bowen was captain of the boat. At that time, captain Sellers, a literary man, and a former river boat captain was writing for prominent papers in St. Louis and New Orleans. One of his articles on the subject of river boats of 26 years ago appeared in one of the papers. Some of the boys didn't like the trend of the article. So one day Captain Bowen said to young Clemens:

"Sam, why don't you write a piece and take off the old man?"

"Oh, I don't like to do that: Sellers is my friend, you know, said Clemens.
"Oh, that needn't he known; you won't have to sign your name,' persisted Capt. Bowen.

"So Sam wrote an article. It took him several days. When finished, he called in Capt. Bowen and several others and submitted it to them. It's simply perfect,' was their unanimous verdict.

"But what shall I sign to it?" asked the proud young author in a quandary.

"At that moment the pilot called out

"At that moment the pilot called out 'lead,' which means they were sound-ed the river. First cast 24 feet; Mark Twain,' the lead-man shouted; 24 feet meaning 'Mark Twain.'

"Sign it 'Mark Twain,' cried Caut. Bowen, as if caught by a happy in-spiration, and it has been 'Mark Twain' for the great writer from that day to the day of his death," said Mr. Worley.

"Clemens had done some writing before this. We called him lazy in that day, because he had little inclination toward muscular work, but he would sit up all night writing articles.

"One day Mrs. Caroline B. Officers, a wealthy woman of Natches who had a plantation and 100 negroes, was on the boat, and while up in the pilot house with the young cub, she remarked to him: 'Mr. Clemens, if I were a girl I would set my cap for you, and take you off the river; your forte is humorous writing.'

that day Sam was a tall, slim lanky sort of a looking fellow, weighing 135 to 149 pounds; kind of a slim Jim. He was a good fellow, and everybody liked him. He never drank or played cards, which habits were almost universal in that day. It shows he had backbone to him. He never had money, and his salary was probably not more than $30 a month. When the war broke out, boating on the Mississippi was busted up, and Sam went west and worked on the Virginia city Enterprise in Nevada. He wrote me and told of what a grand country is the west, and advised me to come out.

"The last time I met him was up in Montana some 20 years ago when he was on his way to lecture in Australia. We had a good talk and I went as a guest to listen to his lecture. He was a splendid old Mark, and we all loved him; he was a great American."

THE REV. G. D. B. MILLER DEAD. Former Head Master of St. Mark's School Here Dies in St. Louis,

The Rev. Dr. G. D. B. Miller died this orning in St. Louis, The Rev. Dr. Miller was a native of western New York born in 1828, which would make him 76 years old at the time of his death. He was educated at Union college, Scheneciady, N. V., and after preparation for the Episcopal ministry was ordained and sent, in 1867, to Boise, Ida., then a struggling, straggling village, as the curate of the Episcopal church there, Dr. Miller subsequently went to China as a missionary for one year. But the work there was evidently too rigorous for him, as he returned to the United States in 1873, to be appointed headmaster of St. Mark's school in this city. Dr. Miller proved a most excellent principal; his pupils all loved and re-spected him, and he was a disciplinar-ian who could enforce order without rubbing the fur the wrong way. His bishop of the episcopal church, a position equivalent to that of archbishop in the Anglican church. Mrs. Miller survives her husband. There are many old time residents of Salt Lake who will remember Dr. Miller, and recall their acquaintance with him in a very pleasant way, for he was a man who was much respected, and a good citizen in every way. As an educator he was of special prominence. The decased for some time previous to his death was rector of a church at Benton, a suburb of St. Louis. bishop of the episcopal church, a posi

The program will also contain a number of interesting topies for discussion among the principals. "The Effective Use of the Stereoscope in the Class Room," will be discussed by Principals Powers, Reilly and J. H. Coombs, and "Effective Methods in the Teaching of Writing in the Public Schools," will be considered by Principals Barton, Van Cott, Chambers and Brown.

As an outcome of the agitation for the abolishment of lace curtains and window draperies in the class rooms, the contention being that they are unsanitary, the question "Should the use of the lace curtain in the school window be discontinued in the interests of sanitation?" will be presented at the meeting for general discussion. In several of the city schools there are a few rooms, especially those situated on the ground floors, that have the lower halves of the windows covered with curtains. It is urged by some that because of the collection of dust in the curtains they are unsanitary and their use should be discontinued.

Last Week's Temperatures—The temperature for the past week varied 4 to 8 degrees above the normal, though in places it fell to freezing and did some damage. The rainfall has been very light, considerably below the normal. But at Marion in Summit county, the rainfall was 1.04 inches, and at Providence, Cache county, 1.6 inches was the record.

Checking up Property—Assistant Adjutant General H. M. H. Lund has gone to Manti, Richfield and Ephraim to check up on quartermaster's stores in possession of the infantry companies there.

Petition for Spur Track—The Farmers Grain & Milling company has presented a petition to the city council asking that a franchise be granted the Oregon Short Line for the construction of a spur frack running to the property on South Temple street between Eighth and Ninth West streets, on which the company is preparing to erect a grain elevator and storage warehouse.

Want Watermain Extension-An extension of the water mains on Tem-pest avenue, between Third and Pith East streets, is asked for in a petition filed with the city recorder this morning by a number of property owners in that district.

Want Watertank on Bench-Because of the great number of teams hauling from the north bench, and the approach of hot weather, the city council is petitioned by upwards of a hundred property owners to construct a water tank on B street above Ninth avenue.

Want Governor to Attend-An invi-Want Governor to Attend—An invi-tation was received by Gov. William Spry this morning to attend the world's fair banquet to be given at the Hotel Astor, New York, May 5 by the citizen's world fair committee. The banquet is given in the interest of the New York international ex-position to be held in 1913 to com-memorate the three hundredth an-niversary of the settlement of Man-hattan Island by the Dutch. Street Department Criticised-The Street Department Criticised—The street department is being criticised by residents in the southeastern section of the city for lack of attention to details. For two days the irrigation ditch between Browning and Ressevelt avenues has been overflowing into the street ad during the process converting the atreet into a lake of large and generous dimensions. While citizens in the vicinity have been enjoying a superabundance of water, residents on Ninth South, Tenth East and Belmont avenue have had to keep their windows closed owing to the dust raised by the long strings of teams passing continuously to dump the dirst taken out on Ninth East during paying operations by P. J. Moran, There is a long and vehement wall for the sprinking wagon in this locality.

W. H. Lee, traveling freight agent of the Salt Lake Route, has resumed his duties and is out on a trip after wool. His road ships more wool out of Utah than all other roads combined, and the "woolgatherers" have a somewhat strenuous time of it for a few months in the spring. George Ehle, a wealthy New York business man, is in Salt Lake for a day or two on his way east from California. He occupies the private car "Jolantie" now sidetracked at the Denver & Rio Grande yards. Mr. Ehle is accom-panied by his family.

J. C. Dailey, general superintendent of the Utah lines of the Denver & Rie Grande, is down the line on an in-
